Description of the Event / Activity –
Introduction On 3rd November 2024 , the NSS Cell of Bengal College of Engineering and Technology organized a Community Food and Cloth Distribution Drive as part of its " Helping Hands Outreach Program ." The programme was designed to assist economically disadvantaged individuals by providing basic necessities and to inspire students to actively participate in humanitarian initiatives.
Planning and Execution The NSS volunteers collected and arranged food materials and usable clothing items before the event. The distribution locations were identified in advance to ensure effective outreach. Volunteers worked in teams to coordinate logistics, transportation and beneficiary assistance.
Activities Conducted The programme involved the distribution of food packets and clothing materials to underprivileged community members. Students interacted with beneficiaries, assisted elderly individuals and ensured smooth distribution of materials. The activity was carried out with dignity and respect for all recipients.
Student Participation A total of 31 students participated as volunteers in the programme. Their active involvement demonstrated a strong sense of social commitment and teamwork. Students from various departments worked collectively to make the programme successful.

Conclusion

The Food and Cloth Distribution Programme held on 3rd November 2024 was a successful outreach initiative that reflected the institution's commitment to community welfare. The programme not only provided material assistance to needy individuals but also encouraged students to become responsible and compassionate citizens.
