Description of the Event / Activity– The NSS Cell of Bengal College of Engineering and Technology organized a Food and Cloth Distribution Programme on 10th November 2023 under the banner of the " Helping Hands Outreach Program. " The initiative was undertaken to extend support to disadvantaged sections of society and to instill humanitarian values among students through direct community engagement. Planning and Organization The NSS Cell coordinated the programme with the active involvement of student volunteers. Necessary food items and wearable clothes were collected, sorted and packed prior to the event. Volunteers planned the distribution process to ensure that assistance reached deserving beneficiaries in an organized manner. Activities Conducted Volunteers distributed food packets and clothes among needy individuals residing in nearby localities. Students interacted with beneficiaries and assisted in the systematic distribution of materials. The activity provided an opportunity for volunteers to understand social challenges and contribute meaningfully towards community welfare. Student Participation A total of 34 student volunteers from different departments actively participated in the programme. Their dedication and enthusiasm played a significant role in the successful implementation of the activity.

Conclusion

The Food and Cloth Distribution Programme conducted on 10th November 2023 successfully achieved its objective of providing support to underprivileged communities. The programme also helped students develop a deeper understanding of social responsibility and reinforced the spirit of service promoted through NSS activities.
